

Hold it! It's time for presentations

Senior engineer officers aboard SA Oranje decided to get together and offer a special award of their own to encourage progress in the course of engineer officers' training at sea

At left, a presentation of quite another kind. Early this year crew members of Nicolas Bowater decided to cheer up the children in the Christopher Fisher Division of the Western Memorial Hospital at Corner Brook, Newfoundland. By paying a bit extra in their own clubroom they saved to buy the children a record player and television set. Here Mr. C. A. Streets (second from left) receives the gifts aboard Nicolas Bowater from crewmen Jim Lowe, Desmond Reynolds, Ronald Smith, Fred Boardman, Patrick Rumbolt, Allan Robertson and John Brennan. Terry Hawley (not in picture) was the man who arranged the collection
