

subjects to photograph, and in any case the King Line's recent Spanish-built vessels have entered service almost as if they were naturally camera-shy; they are seldom seen in the UK.

The Dutch picture gives a clear impression of King William at work in her proper port environment. We are indebted to P. van Veen of Wm. H. Muller & Co., for the opportunity of reproducing it.

Sculptor in marge

D. Grubb, first assistant cook (cold larder) on board Windor Castle, is a man who can easily tell margarine from butter. Because marge is the stuff he has turned into an artistic medium, sculpting it in much the same way as the old masters did their marble.

Margarine, first frozen, is the basis of some remarkable sculpted centrepieces he has made for canape dishes—ships, figure-heads, Neptune, mermaids—to delight passengers on the mail run. In our picture, he is seen with some of his work in the ship's dining room.

Congratulations

Congratulations to Windor Castle, Union-Castle's flagship, and all who serve in her. In June the mailship completed her 100th round voyage on the Cape service from Southampton.

The event was marked by gala nights in both passenger classes on both legs of the voyage. Special cakes were baked and Commodore Charney introduced "Miss 100 Voyages".

Surprisingly, since the ship's career started as long ago as August 1960, about 15 of her crew have made as many as 98 or 99 complete round trips in her. CLANSMAN will present pictures of the on-board celebration in issue No. 27.

Geraldine Henshall is the distribution division's internal sales girl responsible for representative backup, stock control and direct ordering. She has been with the company two years, during which she has become well acquainted with the product line. Geraldine lives locally in Barnhead, and lists her interests as music, dancing and reading. She has recently embarked on a course of driving instruction.

Audrey Lamb joined the distribution division this year. She is responsible for sales in Newcastle and north-eastern England. Audrey lives at Hexham and was previously employed in the marketing of double glazing units. Her hobby interests are horse riding and travel.

Latest member of the sales team is Sue Ferguson, who has taken over responsibility for sales in the Manchester area. She also moves up into the Preston and Blackpool areas to service large accounts. Sue comes from Sale; worked three years in car hire at Manchester Airport. Her hobbies: driving, horse riding, hill walking.
