■ Above: Hayley Mills arrived back in England in December aboard SA Vaal from Cape Town. She had spent a couple of months in South Africa filming The Diamond Hunters, a story based on the novel by Wilbur Smith, in which she plays the leading role. Her husband, film director Roy Boulting, and their 20 month-old son Crispin accompanied her on the voyage home. They are seen being welcomed on board in Cape Town by Commodore Douglas Sonden. ■ On a recent northbound voyage of Edinburg Castle a new cabaret by the ship's officers—The Roaring Twenties—was the highlight of a theme night in both classes, when many passengers turned up in costumes of the period. The officers presented twenties songs, and danced the Charleston and Black Bottom in a routine devised by resident dancers Jean and Charles Waters. They are seen in action below. At left, in the lineup on the stairs, the flappers are: Miss P. Stevenson (junior purser); Miss K. Burrows (nursing sister); Miss A. Connor (third purser); Miss L. van Rooyen (junior purser); Miss M. Waters (hairdresser); Miss B. Lile (junior purser). The boys are: C. Smith (third purser catering); S. Milnes (fourth officer); C. Gimnie (junior purser catering); R. Tovey (hairdresser); G. Parker (third purser); D. Mason (purser). Picture: Transocean Photographic.
